of chicken pox 2 days after vaccination

Succeeded - In this child the vaccine pustule was small but the opinion of several members of Soc. was, that the disease had taken effect. - On the 6th day of the pustule, ^{15th febr} the child became feverish, vomited copiously; two days after this an eruption appeared on the face and breast, which by next day had ~~extended~~ extended to the body & extremities, and proved to be chicken pox.
 This disease ran its usual course, the fever being all along considerable, and the pustules very numerous, particularly on the face.
 They began to blacken on the evening of the 10th day, (25th febr) The child is still in a very critical state. Philadelphia 1822 - Vaccine =

All caught infection from a case of confluent small pox in an adjoining house. One puer on the 3rd, ^{4th} another on the 4th, another on 5th, & another on 6th day. Were seen by Dr Gibbs & A.D. Anderson. The vaccine pustules went (Reinoculated) ~~from~~ the usual stages in the usual Succeeded ~~time~~, & the small pox evidently Succeeded ~~modified~~ by its influence. All the pustules were beginning to scab at the same time, ~~on~~ on the 11th ^{day}
